

and good humor. Ata Kuttab was a tireless source of encouragement and enthusiasm, and Samia Husein-Tamimi typed and retyped the thesis drafts. My gratitude goes to all of them.

During the field-work and surveying of houses, I was assisted by a number of colleagues and students. Most special thanks however are due to my colleague, Nadia Habash, and my former students, Rami Bader and Sawsan Asbah.

I would like to thank all the friends and colleagues who, over the past few years, have given me advice and assistance, in particular: Judy Blanc, who read sections of the thesis and gave very insightful remarks, Dr. Issa Alami, who generously opened his personal library for my use when I was in Edinburgh, and Steve Skelly, Professor Kamal Abdulfattah and Professor Albert Glock for their comments. Vera Tamari was a most helpful resource in contributing her time and energy to the layout of the final draft. Special thanks also go to Dr. Ramzi Sansour for lending his computer and office facilities when they were most needed.

The completion of my work was made possible by financial grants from the University of Edinburgh, Birzeit University and the Overseas Research Awards in Britain. The University of Edinburgh granted me the Faculty Postgraduate Studies Award for three consecutive years (1982-85). Special thanks go to Miss S.I. Geddie who gave me personal support during my stay at Edinburgh.

To the elders of Deir Ghassaneh, most notably to Abu Hani al-'Alem, I lovingly dedicate this work. I hope they will forgive my shortcomings in approximating their realities.
